ISRAELI PRIME MINISTER VISITS UN, CONFERS WITH U THANT

The Prime Minister of Israel, Mr Levi Eshkol, visited United Nations Headquarters in New York last Friday, conferring with Secretary-General, U Thant, for some 40 minutes, attending a luncheon given in his honour and being escorted on a brief tour of Headquarters buildings.

A UN spokesman said that the Prime Minister and the Secretary-General had exchanged views on the Middle East and Viet-Nam in a cordial atmosphere.

The Prime Minister also renewed his invitation to the Secretary-General to visit Israel, and U Thant has accepted in principle.

In a statement issued to newsmen following the meeting and the luncheon, Mr Eshkol referred to the current mission of Ambassador Gunnar Jarring who, as the Secretary-General's special peace envoy, has been contacting the Governments involved in the June 1967 war under the terms of the UN Security Council resolution of 14 June, last. He said it was his hope and that of all the people of Israel, that diplomatic talks now in progress would lead to direct negotiations between the parties with the direct object of bringing about peace and security in the Middle East.

"Surely," said Premier Eshkol, "after twenty years of hostility, time has come for all the countries in the Middle East."

CYPRUS QUESTION

SECRETARY - GENERAL SUBMITS SPECIAL REPORT TO COUNCIL

UN Secretary-General, U Thant, last week expressed misgivings about the decision of the Turkish Cypriot leadership to set up a "Provisional Cyprus Turkish Administration".

While welcoming assurances from the Turkish side that the move was of a practical nature and not related to the final solution of the Cyprus question, U Thant said he could not conceal his misgivings "as to the decision itself, its timing, the way in which it was announced and the publicity given to it by the Turkish Cypriot leadership."

In a special report to the United Nations Security Council on recent developments regarding Cyprus, the Secretary-General pointed out that the new development came only a week after the Council's latest resolution on Cyprus (See BLUE BERET, 27 September 1967, P. 6) and precisely at a time at which he was about to embark on discussions with the parties. It also came, he said, at a time when the Cyprus Government had announced it was on the point of extending initial normalization measures practically to the entire island.

It seemed to him, said the Secretary-General, in view of the strong reactions of the Cyprus and the Greek Governments, that this development might well have a damaging effect both on the use of his good offices and on further steps towards normalization in Cyprus.

U Thant emphasized his hope, however, that, as called upon by the Security Council, all parties would show utmost moderation and restraint and refrain from any further act which might aggravate the situation in Cyprus. Thus, he said, a new and determined effort advocated by the Council might be undertaken with a view to keeping peace and arriving at a permanent settlement of the Cyprus problem.

S-G REAFFIRMS CALL TO END N. VIET-NAM BOMBINGS

Last week, at UN Headquarters in New York, UN Secretary-General U Thant reiterated his long-held conviction that cessation of United States bombing of North Viet-Nam "is the first essential step which alone can lead to meaningful discussions and negotiations" to stop the Viet-Nam war.

Answering newsmen's requests for comment, U Thant added that a statement of the Foreign Minister of North Viet-Nam, carried by "Radio Hanoi" on 1st January, "reinforces this conviction". In his statement, the Foreign Minister said that "after the United States has ended unconditionally the bombing and all other acts of war, (North Viet-Nam) will hold talks..."

HAR DE SET...? SALAMIS

Salamis var omkring år 400 før vor tidsregning Cyperns hovedstad. Sagnet fortæller, at byen blev grundlagt ca 1180 før Kristi fødsel. Gennem tiderne har Salamis haft vekslende størrelse og indflydelse, men jordskælv, angreb og plyndringer lagde efterhånden byen øde, indtil den reduceredes til at være "stenbrud" for udbygningen af Famagusta. De afdækkede ruiner, man i dag kan se, stammer for størstedelen fra romersk tid, og de vigtigste er teatret (i græsk stil) og det såkaldte gymnasium, hvorfra billedet er taget.

I fortsættelse af BT's "næsespøg" bringes her billedet af en DANCON-person, som vi vil bede vore læsere hjælpe os med at identificere. For at stimulere lysten udlover DANCON's presstjeneste en amerikansk skrivemaskine til den først udtrukne rigtige løsning.

History of the 4th/7th Royal Dragoon Guards

The 4th/7th Royal Dragoon Guards was formed from the amalgamation of two of Great Britain's oldest regiments, the 4th Royal Irish Dragoon Guards and the 7th Princess Royal's Dragoon Guards, which themselves were formed within three years of each other for rather different reasons, the basis of which was religion.

The 4th Dragoon Guards was formed in 1685 as the result of an order from King James II, a Catholic, to the Earl of Arran, and were thus known as Arran's Horse. The King was frightened for his throne in a predominately Protestant country and decided to increase his Army. As a result he survived the Monmouth rebellion of the same year. The troops in the regiment were paid the then princely sum of two shillings and sixpence per day and had to provide their own horses!

In 1688, King James fled the country and William of Orange became king. As a reward for help he had given the new King, the Duke of Devonshire was authorised to form his own regiment which became the 7th Princess Royals Dragoon Guards. It was the first to see action at the Battle of Boyne in Ireland where James made a last attempt to regain the throne.

Both regiments served under William III in the campaign in Holland and Belgium, returning to Britain in 1698. Arran's Horse then remained in Ireland for almost a century whilst the 7th fought under the Duke of Marlborough in the victorious battles of Blenheim, Ramillies, Oudenarde and Malplaquet. The 7th returned to Ireland in 1714.

Arran's Horse changed its title to the 1st Irish Horse and was known as the Blue Horse from the colour of their coat facings.

On one occasion in 1736 the 4th marched out of Philipstown (now Daingean, Co. Offaly) and the Dublin Daily Advertiser of 12 December remarked that "they left us in the extraordinary circumstances — they owed no money. The night before they left, they drank 40 bowls of punch."

In 1743 the regiment fought against the French and at the battle of Dettingen captured two kettle drums, one of which is now in the Regimental Museum at Halifax. Here the standard bearer, a Cornet Richardson, who received 37 sabre cuts and bullet wounds, remarked to the Colonel, later Earl Ligonier, "If the wood of the Standard Pike had not been made of iron, the Standard would have been lost". It is now in the National Army Museum at Sandhurst.

In 1746, the Regiment returned to Ireland and was ranked as the 4th Irish Horse, known as the Black Horse, but in 1788 both Regiments changed again for the last time, reverting to their original titles.

The 4th Royal Irish Dragoon Guards moved to England in 1798 and thence to Portugal where it fought under the Duke of Wellington until returning home in 1813. In 1854 it left again for the Crimea and took part in the battle of Balaclava.

The 7th Princess Royals Dragoon Guards saw action against dissident tribesmen in South Africa in the 1840s and in Egypt in 1882 when, together with the 4th, they took part in the Battle of Tel-el-Kebir.

BRITCON NEWS

The 7th was also in the Boer War in South Africa from 1900 to 1904. Later it went to India where it was in 1914. The Regiment was immediately recalled to England for service in France, arriving there in October.

At the outbreak of World War I the 4th was in England but arrived in France twelve days later. After only a further six days an officer of the regiment drew the first blood by sword of the subsequent four years flood of gore and a corporal fired the first of millions of shots.

In 'B' Sqn 4/7 DG, are the Ferrey brothers, Mick and Bob, from Shipley, Yorks. Mick is a storeman in the unit and Bob is a driver operator.

Both were heavily commended as mounted troops in trench warfare. Banners added to their status were won at Mons, Ypres, Cambrai. Amongst the heroes was Captain Carton de Wiart who won the VC and later rose to the rank of Lieutenant-General.

As if that was not enough, the 4th was the first to capture prisoners and the first to cross the river Dendre in Belgium only two days before the armistice.

The amalgamation of the 4th/7th Dragoon Guards took place in 1922 and in 1936, the 'Princess Royal' was re-granted its title. The regiment was mechanised after 250 years of mounted service. In 1939 it arrived in France soon after the commencement of the Second World War. Nearly five years later, specially water-proofed for the first time, it 'waded' across the English Channel on D Day, 1944. Later they led the column to Arnhem where they were the first to link up with the American Forces in May 1945. On 4 May, 1945, they were the last British troops to action alongside the 1st Highland Division. The assessment in the D-Day report soon after VE Day that the regiment would be the first to 'take' the foundations of the future tank men as the 'Last Regiment' had foundations.

Since 1945 the Regiment has served in Palestine, North Africa, and Germany where early in 1965 the squadron converted from tanks to armoured cars. The Regiment has also been in England and North Africa where in Omagh, the remaining three squadrons are currently located whilst the 4th Squadron is at Zyyi with the 1st Force.

UN Assembly Ends Session

Last month, the UN General Assembly concluded its 22nd session. Above, Assembly President, Mr. Corneliu Manescu, is shown presiding over closing meeting.

JORDAN DENOUNCES ISRAEL ATTACK ON REFUGEE CAMP

In a letter to UN Secretary-General, U Thant, Jordan last week complained that Israeli forces on the West Bank had shelled the Wadi El-Yabis refugee camp on the East Bank on 1st January, causing the death of three civilians and serious injuries to six others, including a child.

Ambassador Muhammad El-Farra said in his letter that this was one of a series of unprovoked attacks carried out by Israel in spite of the 14 June resolution of the UN Security Council which asked Israel to insure the safety and welfare of the inhabitants of war-torn areas, and to facilitate the return of those who had fled as a result of the June conflict.

Noting that the Council had asked the Secretary-General to check on the implementation of that resolution, Ambassador El-Farra asked that adequate steps be taken to end what he called "these Israeli crimes".

200 MILLION DOLLARS SOUGHT FOR WORLD FOOD PROGRAM

The third pledging conference of the World Food Program was scheduled to take place at UN Headquarters in New York on 8 January.

The UN General Assembly — formed by the 123 Member States of the United Nations and which recently held its 22nd regular session in New York — and the Conference of the Food and Agriculture Organization have set a target of 200 million dollars for 1969-70.

Pledges may be in the form of commodities, cash and services such as shipping.

The World Food Program was set up primarily to assist countries in carrying out economic and social development projects, but also to aid victims of emergencies caused by natural disasters.

In the first 5 years of its existence, the Program has approved development projects in 64 countries and has carried out emergency operations in 42 nations.

TWENTY YEARS

1968, INTERNATIONAL YEAR FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

This year, 1968, will be observed throughout the world as International Year for Human Rights marking the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights by the UN General Assembly on 10 December 1948.

In a message issued by the President of the UN General Assembly, Mr Corneliu Manescu of Romania, to usher in this commemorative year, he urges all States and all international organisations to dedicate themselves "with renewed vigour", to the task of securing for people the world over the full enjoyment of their human rights.

In the two decades which have passed since the adoption of the Universal Declaration, states Mr Manescu, it has never ceased to grow in timeliness and importance. In this respect, he adds, of great significance have been the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly which recognize the sovereign right of peoples to decide their own future and to manage their wealth and natural resources.

The progress achieved since the adoption of the Declaration of Human Rights in the implementation of those rights and of fundamental freedoms cannot, however, blind the world to the fact that the provisions of the Declaration are still disregarded in various parts of the globe where human beings are being subjected to injustices which are incompatible with the civilization of our time, Mr Manescu says.

The International Year for Human Rights emphasizes all the more "the great responsibility we all bear" in the matter of the complete implementation, by combined efforts, of the provisions of the Universal Declaration, so as to ensure respect for human dignity and equal and inalienable rights for all, states the Assembly President.
